After a one-month treatment, it is recommended to make a therapeutic pause of approximately one week, and then repeat the treatment for another month if necessary.

Action mechanisms

ViaZen Energy aims energetic efficiency improvement in order to optimize the physical and mental capacities.

The lack of energy occurs when the organism is unable to provide an optimal energetic supply, to meet its needs adequately. By its adaptogen properties, the Siberian ginseng improves the adaptation capacity to the environmental factors. By controlling the pituitary-adrenal axis, it ensures the balance of the adrenal's functions and contributes to a better management of the daily stress. It thus reduces the useless loss of energy, eliminates the tiredness which results and allows a greater endurance.

The literature also reports the effectiveness of the Siberian ginseng to improve the cognitive functions. Immunity also takes advantage from this medicinal plant, because it increases the cellular and the humoral immune activities.

The action of chromium ensures insulin regulation and that of blood glucose, allowing cells to benefit from a continuous and optimal glucose supply.

The vitamins B1, B2, B3 and B5, allow an optimal energy production and an effective lipid and protein metabolism. B Vitamins support the nervous functions via their contribution to the nerve impulse transmission.

Achieving an optimal level of activity within the body also depends on thyroid function. The incorporation of L-tyrosine in this formula contributes to the synthesis thyroid hormones and homeostasis of this gland.

In summary, ViaZen Energy has tonic properties. This natural health product simultaneously supports several physiological processes implied in cellular energy production.
